Value-added service

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

A value-added service (VAS) is popular as a telecommunications industry term for non-core services, or in short, all services beyond standard voice calls and fax transmissions. However, it can be used in any service industry, for services available at little or no cost, to promote their primary business. In the telecommunication industry, on a conceptual level, value-added services add value to the standard service offering, spurring the subscriber to use their phone more and allowing the operator to drive up their ARPU. For mobile phones, while technologies like SMS, MMS and GPRS are usually considered value-added services, a distinction may also be made between standard (peer-to-peer) content and premium-charged content. These are called mobile value-added services (MVAS) which are often simply referred as VAS.

Value-added services are supplied either in-house by the mobile network operator themselves or by a third-party value-added service provider (VASP), also known as a content provider (CP) such as All Headline News or Reuters.

VASPs typically connect to the operator using protocols like Short message peer-to-peer protocol (SMPP), connecting either directly to the short message service centre (SMSC) or, increasingly, to a messaging gateway that gives the operator better control of the content.

From Wikipedia founder Jimmy Wales

Google might have close to a million servers. Yahoo has something like 13,000 staff. We have 400 servers and 95 staff. Wikipedia is the #5 site on the web and serves 454 million different people every month – with billions of page views. Commerce is fine. Advertising is not evil. But it doesn't belong here. Not in Wikipedia.

Wikipedia is something special. It is like a library or a public park. It is like a temple for the mind. It is a place we can all go to think, to learn, to share our knowledge with others.

When I founded Wikipedia, I could have made it into a for-profit company with advertising banners, but I decided to do something different. We've worked hard over the years to keep it lean and tight. We fulfill our mission, and leave waste to others.

If everyone reading this donated $20, we would only have to fundraise for one day a year. But not everyone can or will donate. And that's fine. Each year just enough people decide to give.

This year, please consider making a donation of $5, $20, $50 or whatever you can to protect and sustain Wikipedia.

Thanks,
Jimmy Wales
Wikipedia Founder

Where your donation goes

Technology: Servers, bandwidth, maintenance, development. Wikipedia is the #5 website in the world, and it runs on a fraction of what other top websites spend.

People: The other top 10 websites have thousands of employees. We have fewer than 100 employees, making your donation a great investment in a highly-efficient not-for-profit organization.

By donating, you are sharing your information with the Wikimedia Foundation, the nonprofit organization that hosts Wikipedia and other Wikimedia projects, and its service providers in the U.S. and elsewhere pursuant to our donor privacy policy. We do not sell or trade your information to anyone. For more information please read our donor policy.

HELP OUT

The LII relies on generous contributions of money, time, and talent to keep our site running, keep the content updated, and keep furthering our mission of providing free legal information to everyone, both in the US and around the world. There are many ways you can help support our efforts:

GIVE

Monetary donations are a vital source of revenue for the LII. We encourage you to donate now to support free law. For more information about major gift opportunities that could significantly transform the spread of free law around the world, please contact us.

SPONSOR

The LII offers a variety of exclusive sponsorship opportunities in our website collections, our widely-read LII Supreme Court Bulletin, and at an upcoming global legal information conference.

Advertise
One easy and inexpensive way to appear on the LII website is to sign-up for Google's AdWords program, where you can purchase pay-per-click display advertising on pages of the LII site, as well as on other websites. Learn how to place your AdWords ads on the LII.

CREATE

If you enjoy writing and editing legal information, the LII wants to hear from you! We are seeking volunteer contributors to help us maintain sections of our site and to help non-legal users find the information they are looking for. We also have academic year opportunities for Cornell Law students, and summer opportunities for law students and students studying computer science, information science, or web development.

UPDATE: As of January 1st, 2009, the Wikimedia Foundation reached its $6 million goal. As Jimmy Wales writes: "Any donations beyond that are put in a reserve fund, which will help us to offset operating costs beyond the current fiscal year. Your continued support will also serve as a much-needed financial safety net if economic conditions continue to worsen globally." Rand Montoya 21:28, 9 January 2009 (UTC) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2008 and ending June 30, 2009, we have budgeted $5.9 million in expenses, and an annual operating reserve of $1.36 million. We are hoping to raise $6 million through our annual campaign. We hope to raise the remaining revenue through our other fundraising activities throughout the fiscal year, and with business development (such as licensing the Wikipedia name and logo for commercial uses).

LII

2009 - Tom Bruce -- He has adopted a try-everything approach for LII. These include: donation, sponsorship for lawyer listing/placement, full-text download purchases, Google ads, local ads. They run a twice yearly fund drive (around June and before year-end, December). December is by far the more successful and they are considering dropping the June drive. LII raises ~$130k/year from fund drives.
