

znr2

Zachary Romeo's Individual Contribution Page

Semester Contributions

Currently I am working with the Plate Settler Spacing team to test tube settler robustness. I help run experiments and check on them daily for troubleshooting. I have also helped collect and analyze data for graphical analysis, as well as started work on an attempt to develop a physical model for velocity gradients within the settler with respect to the floc roll-up phenomenon. This process has involved generating a clean MathCad file for theoretical calculations.

Pages Created

Content created by Anonymous

There are no pages at the moment.
